Hongkong, November 3rd 1384. THE King of Burmah has apparently addressed himself with determination to the consequences to himself. His Majesty is rash certainly, curious doubtless. At all events, spectators of the play are both curious and interested. King Themsaw wishes tience of the British Indian Government have any limit. He has been permitted to exercise his own-sweet will so long unrestrained that he must have arrived at the ing the traffic in spirituous liquous in the latter conclusion that there is no length to which country. The agreement was signed in London he can proceed, no atrocity he can commit that will arouse the indignation of the Christian but most indifferent Government whichis established at Calcutta, This monarch telegram from London, to the effect that has, during his short reign, rivalled the ferocious iniquities of News and Domitian, and seems to be animated by the same thirst for blood that possessed those insatiable tyrants. Not long after his succession he caused the revelled in cruelties. His Queen has proved a fitting mate for so monstrous a potentate, and has rivalled his darkest deeds by all kinds tions of her enemies. Meantime, the kingdom has suffered frightfully from misrule. and trade has been practically extinguished by the ever increasing exactions of the King. The Kachyens and other tribes have been driven into open rebellion by the tyranny and ill-treatment of the Mandalay officials. content, anarchy reigns throughout its borders, and tons of thousands of the population have been within the last year or two forced to seek refuge in British Burmah. Matters long ago arrived at such a pass as should have compelled the intervention of any neighbouring civilised state, but the British Indian Government, possibly in obedience to instructions from home, saw fit to leave Burman stewing in its own gravy, to the great scandal of the civilised world. while rash and costly enterprises of neither countries where British interference was not called for and was most undesirable. The Saigennais publishes a brief note of events in Formosa from information gathered from the ironelad Triomphante, which arrived at Saigon on the 20th October. After referring to the operations at Kelung, our contemporary says:-"The divorsion against Tamsui confided to Admiral Lospéshus not been completely successful. After a hombardment of a few hours the Admiral silenced the forts, but on account of the small number of men at his disposal he was unable to carry out his orders to take the torpedo station on shore." It would seem, therefore, that the immediate object of the landing party at Tamsui was to obtain possession of the connections with the torpedoes hid at the entrance to the harbour. Lieutenant Dehorter, who was with the landing party, received a fatal wound n the chest. For seven days it was hoped he would recover, but notwithstanding all the efforts made to save his life, he succumbed to his injuries. His remains were buried at Saigon and were honoured with a public funeral. Lieutenant Loir, one of the deceased's shipmates, delivered an oration at the grave.

Says "Atlas" in the World :- "Prince Albert Victor and Prince George of Wales are, I see, about to try their hands at authorship. From the first day (September 17, 1879) of their cadetship on board the Bacchante they started a journal and kept a daily note-book, wherein were chronicled the sights and strange things that they encountered during their trip in 1879-80 in the Mediterraneau, back to Madeira, and on to the West Indies. The same idea was kept up during the little run to Bantry Bay in July, 1880, and again when the Bacchante left Spit head on Tuesday, September 14, 1880, for a long voyage, and reached home, after a two years' eruise, on August 7th, 1882. After a long and serious discussion this suggestion was On London. decided upon; and early next day, long before the camp was astir, three of the men descended the old mine, the fourth remaining at the windlass. "Good-bye;" said one. "I'll give youngfarewell blow." And raising his pick hestruck the quarts, making On Paris .splinters fly in all directions. His practised eye caught sight of a glittoring speck in one of the bits at his feet. Stooping, he examined it and the place he had struck, when, with a loud exclamation, he knelt and satisfied himself that it was gold! He then commenced picking vigorously. His mates caught the meaning, and followed his example. In dead silence they worked onthey had discovered smonster nugget! Then a wild, glad shout sounded in the ears of the one at the windlass, who had sunk into a half-doze, feeling, probably, the want of his breakfast. So writes Carlyle of George Fox. Born in July, 1624, and dying | Luzon Sugar Refining Company, Limited-$70 at the age of sixty-six, he lived through troubleus times; his fight was with princi- Hongkong Ice Company's Shares-$140 per palities and powers and persecutors; and Hongkong and China Bakery Company, Limited before his death he saw the results of his labours, and to his last epistle he added Perak Tin Mining and Smelting Company a postscript that "in this land and abroad, bear that in Holland and Germany, and thereaway, Friends are in love, unity, and peace;" he names many colonies! where that unity was known, and his last words-written, by the bye, to the Irish Quakers-were, "My love in the Lord Jesus Christ to all Friends everywhere in your land, as though I named them." This pastoral letter was written on a Saturday; on the following day he preached in Gracechurch Street Meeting, and on the Tuesday night he died, testifying to the last to the power that "is over all weakness and death." In his youth, the civil war broke out; be was apprenticed to a man who "combined the trades of sheemakinig, wooldealing, and farming; " he led a quiet, contemplative country life till the year 1643. when, objecting to the drinking of healths, after a night of unrest he believed he had a command to "formke all, young and old, to keep out of the way of all, and to be a stranger to all." He left his home, and wandered clowly on to Lutterworth, Barnet, London, troubled in soul, seeking none amongst the religious people he associated with; and then returning ill at case to Drayton. With the vicar, Stevens, he had conversation, with neighbouring divines he consulted, and with relatives. The advice w. he received was to marry, to smoke tobacco, to sing pealme, to take physic! His replies were characteristic of the mingled simplicity and wisdom of the man: he was too young to be married, and must first get wisdom! Tobacco be could not love; and " psalms I was not in a state to sing." Dukinfield he first began to preach, and continued at Mansfield. A little later, at Nottingham, he had the first indication of the persecution he had to meet. He was taken from the church to the gaol, and before the mayor, aldermen and sheriffs, but speedily released from custody. At Mansfield Woodbouse he attempted to speak in the church, and was "beaten severely with sticks and Bibles," and thenceforward his life was one of preselytising and of partial persecution. Above a score of ministers now supported the founder of the "Quakere," as Justice Bonnet had called them-Farnworth, Aldam, Francis Howgill, James Parnell (the "boy preacher"), and Beiphong ... Hongkong... Edward Burrough, were amongst them, as well as that ill-fated man whom Charles Lamb describes, that "much-injured, ridi- wiediouled man, James Naylor," and by these men, despite pains and penalties, Quakerism was firmly established. It had to bear, however, the test of the fidelity of its members to their belief. For was imprisoned in Launceston Gaol for refusing to take the Outh of Abjuration: James Naylor, on a charge of bluaphemy, was pilloried, whipped, his Manila 25.81 [8.27] tongue bored with red hot iron, and his fore- Honekong head branded; Margaret Fell, for oath-Friends were committed to prison innocent of crime or violence;" and this in the days when, according to Macaulay, pri sons were "hells upon earth, seminaries of every vice and of every disease." Abroad, in New England, some were bung ; men had their earn out off and women were whipped for spreading what they esteemed as the truth of Quakerism; and yet the blood of the martyrs proved to be the seed of the Church. Gradually the fives of the members of the body impressed the people, the parliament, and the priests; the bonds-were relaxed, the imprisonments grow fewer, and finally that curious repository of quaint information as to the sufferings of the Quakers, their localities, and position-Besse's "Sufferings"—ceases to fill its folios with the record of loss of life, of limb and of property.
